

Going to see

Miss Nelson is Missing

at

I am going to Orlando Shakes to see Miss Nelson is Missing. Going to the theater is fun!

I will see Miss Nelson is Missing. It is a play, not a movie. It is different than the movie.

It will be in the Margeson Theater.

Miss Nelson is Missing is a musical based on the book by James Marshall and Harry Allard. There are many different ways to tell this story. Sometimes it is with a movie. Sometimes it is with a book. Sometimes it is with live actors in a theater.

They are all good ways. But they are all a little different.

Actors pretend to be kids and adults. The same actor may play many different characters.

There will be some times when there are special effects, like flashing lights or sound effects.

It is pretend. Nobody is in danger. The characters may sometimes talk in a loud voice or make loud sounds.

I can cover my ears or go to a quiet area if I am scared or it is too loud for me. I can whisper to my caregivers and they will take me there.

I will try to stay in my seat so everyone is safe and can enjoy the show.

It is good to sit, listen and watch.

If I need to stand, I can stand in a place where there are not people behind me, or go outside, and come back when I can sit again.

At the end of the show, everyone claps. The actors bow.

Going to the theater is fun!

I will have a good time!
